Warren lead up to 6 points, Obama's down to 14

Raleigh, N.C. – PPP's newest Massachusetts poll finds two races going in opposite directions- Mitt Romney's cut Barack Obama's lead to its smallest level in the state all year. But at the same time Elizabeth Warren's built her advantage out to the widest margin we've ever found.

Warren leads Scott Brown 50-44. The big change over the last month is that Brown's image is finally starting to take a hit. His approval rating is now a +7 spread at 49/42, down a net 14 points from mid-September when he was at 55/34.

The biggest thing that continues to make it very hard for Brown to win this race is that 52% of voters in the state want Democrats to have control of the US Senate to 35% who want the Republicans in control. Warren is now winning the Democratic vote 82/13, erasing most of the crossover support that Brown had earlier in the year.

In the Presidential race Barack Obama's seeing the same kind of decline in Massachusetts that he is nationally. He leads Mitt Romney by 14 points, 55-41. That's down from an 18 point lead last month, and it's the smallest advantage we've found for him in the state all year. The big shift over the last month in Massachusetts has been among independent voters. They now support Romney 53-40, after giving Obama a 47-44 edge last month.

Obama's approval numbers are pretty consistent with where they were last month, at 55/43 compared to 56/41 last time. But as we've seen other places, Romney's favorability rating is on the rise. He's now seen positively by 42% of voters to 54% who have a negative opinion. That's not good but it's up a net 7 points from a month ago when he was at 39/58.

“Barack Obama’s lead is declining in Massachusetts,” said Dean Debnam, President of Public Policy Polling. “But that’s not rubbing off on Elizabeth Warren. Her lead has increased by 4 points in the last month even as Obama’s has declined by 4.”

PPP surveyed 1,051 likely Massachusetts voters from October 9th to 11th. The margin of error for the survey is +/-3.0%. This poll was not paid for or authorized by any campaign or political organization. PPP surveys are conducted through automated telephone interviews.
